Avar & Co.

There are many complimentary adjectives that come to mind when talking about Avar & Co. but if I were to sum up my relationship with Avar in one word it would be trust. Implicit in this trust is the knowledge that whatever the problems or needs of my business, Avar can be relied upon to provide a solution and this is equally true of my personal affairs. From the humble VAT return, through mortgages to multi-national companies, no business matter is beyond the scope of Avar.

I have known Ash personally for over 15 years, and with Ash, the personal and business relationships are one and the same: its like having your big brother looking out for you the whole time. In that 15 years, another word has emerged alongside that of trust: dependence. With sound advice just a phone call away, I would no longer consider looking at anything of any importance to me without involving Avar, and just as important is that they are usually telling me I need to do something before I am aware it could even become a problem. On the few occasions I have embarked on something without their help, I have usually ended up regretting it, although thankfully getting people out of a mess is one of their specialities.

My final advice is: be it births, deaths or marriages (and all that goes between), don't do it without Avar! (and don't forget to invite Ash).
